JOHN BULL ON THE SLAVE TRADE. - The subject of the slave trade has lately been the theme of very animated discussion in the political circles of England. It appears to have first arisen in Parliament, by means of certain interrogatories addressed to the Government with respect to the increased importation of slaves into Cuba. To these interrogatories Lord Palmerston, in behalf of the Government, replied that very recently the attention of the Spanish Government had been called to the matter by Lord Clarendon, and urgent representations were made, and would be continued, to induce the Government of Madrid to put a stop to the trade. The tone of his remarks, however, implied that he entertained no strong expectation that the evil would be voluntaries ly abated by the Spanish Government.

Subsequently Mr. Roebuck, the great Radical leader of the new House of Commons, having, on a formal notice, moved for a select committee to take into consideration the relations of Great Britain with Brazil, with special reference to the slave trade. delivered a very elaborate and telling speech, which, although it did not save his motion from defeat, perceptibly tinged the later discussions of the press, and modified the views and even the temper of the Times itself. It was one of those remarkable failures that triumph in the very act and moment of miscarriage. We conceive the capital point of Mr. Roebuck's speech worth giving in his own language. Perhaps a moment's retrospect is necessary in order to comprehend its force. Brazil, in 1826, as many of our readers may be aware, formally declared the slave trade piracy, and entered into solemn stipulations with England to exert herself in good faith for its extinction. On the pretext that Brazil was willfully violating her engagements by conniving at the traffic instead of putting an end to it, Parliament, in 1845, passed a bill by which British courts of justice were empowered to adjudicate upon Braziliant essels seized as slavers—a high-handed act which Brazil very properly resented and still resents by refusing to enter into any treaty whatever with Great Britain until its repeal. And her resentment would doubtless be still more emphatic if her strength were more formidable. Certainly a more indefensible outrage has seldom been inflicted by a strong power upon a weak one. The purpose of Mr. Roebuck's motion, and of the speech with which he enforced it, was to procure the repeal of this scandalous measure. And the following are the scorching terms in which he drove home its peculiar injustice and insolence upon Lord Palmerston:

He would ask the noble lord what danger would possibly accrue if a select committee sat to consider whether the act of 1845 ought to be continued, and whether it would not be wise to conciliate the only monarchy in America upon a matter on which they had succumbed to the feeling of the world, and had become, like ourselves, the enemies of the matter on which they had succumbed to the feeling of the world, and had become, like ourselves, the enemies of the slave trade.

The chief communication between many of the provinces of Brazil was by sea, and if the people wanted to send a party of slaves from one province to another they were obliged to send them by sea. Our cruisers sometimes captured these vessels, and declared them to be slaves from Africa. They were then taken before our courts, and were at once condemned. Thus the internal traffic of Brazil was interfered with by our cruisers, and our cruisers, under the forts of Brazil, took possession of ships that were transporting slaves from one province of Brazil to another. The coast of Brazil was 4,000 miles in length. There were various forts on that line of coast, and under the guns of those forts the English cruisers took possession of these Brazilian ships. Should we do this to a strong Power? Suppose an English vessel seized a ship going from New Orleans up the Chesapeake, with slaves on board, and carried her before an English tribunal. Why, America would be in arms; we should be obliged to succumb, and we should show ourselves, as we always were under the noble lord, subservient to the strong and proud and overbearing to the weak. Where a nation had the power to defend itself we were the humble servant of that nation.

Why did not the noble lord interfere with Cuba? The noble lord knew why. He dared not; and should it be said that an English House of Commons would aid and abet all proceedings to subjugate and correct he weak, while before the strong we were humble and subservient? If the noble lord would be interfere with Cuba? The noble lord the Government, it would be it to men who concept to the Government, it would be it to men who concept to the Government, it would be it to the ment of the proceedings to subjugate and cover the weak who concept to the Government, it would be ident to men who concept to the Government, it would be ident to men who con-

In short, he contended that the repeal of the act of 1845 of the problem. Nor does the summary policy sell, styled by Mr. Cobden (himself the "kitchen slave trade, and the necessity of extinguishing them at any cost. Indeed, the pervading anti-slavery sentiment of the House seemed fairly enlisted against the motion. It was accordingly lost by the immense majority of 297.

Yet, as we have intimated, Mr. Roebuck, though overpowered, was the victor still. The Times, which at an earlier stage of the discussion had gone to such lengths in the direction of Lord Palmerston's "preventive policy" as to recommend, in default of some wholesome change in the course of Spain, "a general blockade of the harbors of Cuba by an English squadron," as the only effective means of putting down the slave trade "in its last stronghold," now so far altered its tone as not only to give in its qualified adhesion to Mr. Roebuck's views, but, in no measure exclusively. If, however, we were disa strain of original and vigorous thought suggested by those views, to actually turn short upon the "preventive policy" itself. As this noteworthy somerset of the Times is to some extent significant of the opinions and sentiments of the great commercial classes of England, and as the Times, after the leap, really stands remarkably firm on its feet, we shall make no apology for quoting it at some length. Having alluded in terms of modified appro. val to the loss of Mr. Roebuck's motion-for, be it remembered, the Times is still the friend of Palmerston-it says:

Yet, as we have observed in the speeches, and not less in the great number of those who, after hearing both sides, declined to vote with either, we may see plainly what the House of Commons recards with dislike, and will not long continue to sametion with even a reluctant and hesitating continue to sametion with even a reluctant and hesitating continue to sametion with even a reluctant and hesitating the such control of the such control of the such desired of time the onerous and most thankless duty of the police of the ocean. Whatever the success of an exceptional policy with one nation as compared with another, or whatever treatices or other historical reasons may be alleged, it does not like such a plain difference of dealing as may provoke the charge of mational truculence and baseness made by Mr. Rochuck. There is a policy which, wise or unvise, can neither be suspected, nor even charged with making of Commons would victor and the succession of the succession of the sort; and, though England has certainly proved her courage more than once within Mr. Rochuck's own memory, and need not be so jealous of her honor as he wishes her to be in her dealing with her own flesh and blood across the Atlantic, yet there is at least color for the reproach that we are taking stronger measures with Brazil than with the United States. The Honorable or not, henorable or n

Whether or not Mr. Roebuck is willing to accept the new conclusions to which the Times has been driven by the force of his suggestion, and which, by the way, it elaborates in subsequent articles with an admirable display of thought, he at all events must feel compensated for his Parliamentary defeat by the signal popular triumph to which the "thunderer" bears witness. Indeed, we think he is the only party to the discussion who has won laurels by it. His adversaries have not merely vindicated his sagacity but impeached their own.

As to the Times's new policy of breaking up the slave trade by substituting the Coolie trade in its place, our own opinion, whatever Mr. Roebuck may think of it, is very decided. So far as its intrinsic merits are concerned, we think it hardly deserves a respectful notice. Besides being totally and palpa bly impracticable, it would, at best, only substitute one sort of atrocity for another of a more revolting stamp. Unhappily for the success of the sugges tion, the Coolie system has already been tried, and may now be intelligently judged. It has been so judged, and none familiar with its unutterable barmeasure in its bearing upon the interests of British barities can doubt for an instant that the judgment commerce, Lord Palmerston with characteristic dex- of deep condemnation which has gone up against it

If carried out, it would infallibly set half of Christenknife" of England) the first debater in the House of dom by the ears in less time than a prosperous Commons, and of course were strengthened by a slaver could double the Atlantic. For ourselves, we variety of specious and ingenious arguments, the have no exclusive faith in any particular scheme drift of which was the horrible atrocities of the for the suppression of the slave trade, any more than we should have in a particular movement for the extinction of lying or stealing. Like other evils, it must take its chance with the general system of society, which, heaven knows, is corrupt enough in all its parts. The vices of society like the humors of the body are not to be reached and corrected by mere local applications. The vital channels mus be purified. Unquestionably the slave trade is a flagrant wickedness, but it is also a rooted one. It cannot be eradicated by a specific. It must be dealt with in a large and dispassionate way. Under Providence, we look for the mitigation of its horrors, if not for its final suppression, to the gradual advancement of civilization (aided by all beneficent agencies), but to posed to attribute greater importance to one instrumentality than another, we should be inclined to rank the colonization and Christianization of Africa above all others. This undoubtedly would touch the fountain head. Yet even this would prove impotent without the rest. Reform, national or social, is the most comprehensive and catholic of things. It abhors "one idea," Representing the net result of all the forces of humanity, it must hold relation with everything or nothing. Special movements of reform are valuable chiefly as they elevate the general tone of society, and should be directed with an eye to that effect. And, in this view, as well as the narrower one of adaptation to the particular end in question, we think the American Colonization Society might possibly turn out to be worth more than all the armed squadrons that could float in the Gulf of Guinea. The idea is surely worth pondering at the present

[For the Louisville Bulletin.] TWILIGHT THOUGHTS.

Beneath the trees at eventide I lie, While strange wild fancies hold their solemn sway; I hear through ancient trees the wild winds sigh, Hymning the requiem of the dying day, And gaze far down dim vistas of the sky Where cloud-land's fairy mountains stretch away.

I see the sinking sun's last beams retire From crimson chambers of the far-off West, And in my heart a wild and strange desire, A restless longing agitates my breast, To pass, through sunset's gate of cloud and fire, To you fair Heaven of light, and love, and rest.

To watch the stars come out in glittering throngs, Shining through fleecy clouds and vapors pale, To hear the wild birds trill their evening songs

And listen to the softly-sighing gale; These are the joys for which my spirit longs— They bring no sorrows in their shining trail.

And thankful thoughts to gayer hours unknown Glow in my heart, and sparkle in my eyes; I thank Thee, Father, for thy goodness shown In twinkling stars, in flowers of varied dyes, For sunlight o'er my earthly pathway thrown,

For hopes that gild the future's summer skies

THE FIREMAN'S PROCESSION.—The Invincible Fire Company, No. 2, of Indianapolis, reached the with them their fine engine, "Conqueror," and accompanied by the band of the National Guards of Indianapolis. They were received by deputation from the different fire campanies, and escorted to the Union engine house, where their apparatus was deposited, and then to Owen's Hotel. A fireman's procession took place last evening, which was very imposing. It was preceded by the Invincibles, who are a fine-looking body of young men, followed by their engine, the Conqueror, which was drawn by the firemen of our city, according to their respective order, and with their apparatus. Many of the engines were decorated with flowers, and one of them had a live fox. Besides the Indianapolis band, Plato's band was in the procession. The whole was very imposing, and extended about half a mile .-We understand that the Indiapolis firemen will leave

CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY, LEWIS Co., Mo. - We have repeatedly spoken of this Institution, and the untiring efforts of its founder, Elder D. P. Henderson, of this city. In his late and successful tour in the South, the endowment fund was increased to more than $150,000, independent of the grounds and splendid edifice (now completed), capable of holding 500 students.

The papers in the South spoke of this Institution and the labors of Elder Henderson in a most complimentary manner, and have rendered very effect tive aid towards its rapid completion. The public feeling throughout the country is enlisted in favor of all our institutions of learning, and from the liberality manifested we hope to see all our Colleges and Universities fully endowed and amply equipped to give as thorough an education to our youth as is given in Europe.

The citizens of Lewis county, Mo, with the citizens of Canton and DeSoto, have determined to give a hearty welcome to Dr. Henderson and the guests who may visit the institution at its commencement. on next Friday. Elder H., Dr. S. E. Shepperd, of New York, and many of our citizens will leave here on Monday, to enjoy the festivities of the commence ment, and to partake of a complimentary dinner to be prepared for the occasion. The trip will be very pleasant, and the Trustees as well as the citizens of Lewis county will be happy to see all the friends of education on that day.

ARMY WORM .- We learn that the army worm has made its appearance in several places in this vicinity. We saw this morning a field of barley from which they had cut off all the beard, giving it the appearance of smooth-head wheat. They were at work upon it in great numbers, and, unless their ravages are stayed by hot sunshine, they will totally destroy the entire field. The only means of checking them is by plowing trenches across their track, and, if necessary, deepening the trenches with lines they may be killed in these trenches by hauling small log or other smooth piece of timber along them every day.

The storm of Saturday night was very severe and did an immense amount of damage in the vicinity of Polk Run, Clarke county, Ind. Trees were blown down, roofs blown off, fences carried away, city about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, bringing and the growing crops prostrated. Many orchard were almost destroyed and it is supposed much stock was destroyed.

According to general report, there was a kind of special Assize Court held night before last, below the city, near the site of old Fort Rosalie, and beneath the early light of the waning moon. It was one of those courts over which neither our high ourt or Circuit Judges preside, but which are called nto being occasionally by the necessity of the case. It seems that quite a number of valuable negroes have been stolen or row if from this neighborhood within a few weeks sack. The absenting slaves are generally believed to have been entited away by white men, under presence of a safe conduct to a Northern clime; but was, after getting possession of the negroes, have heartlessly sold them. One or two slaves thus decoyed away, have been recovered, while others are still absent. It is generally reported that a man by the name of Foster, or who gave himself that name, and who had been implicated in this wholesale business of negrostealing, was taken somewhere below Fort Rosalie, night before last, and had administered to him a stealing, was taken somewhere below Fort Rosalie, night before last, and had administered to him a most royal cow-hide flagellation, well laid on, after which a skiff was tendered him with free permission to travel to some other vicinity where negro-stealing was differently punished. Under the effects of his punishment, it is understood that he made a full confession, implicating some other persons in this vicinity. We presume the latter will find Natchez an undesirable place of residence.

Public feeling is somewhat excited with regard to this matter, and with no small degree of justification. About three weeks since, quite a large number of negroes made their escape from a neighboring country, and upon examination it was found that a book and pamphlet pedlar had been about; and that amid his multifarious pursuits had been that of distributing tracts, within the paper cover of which was a pocket, and in that pocket a printed slip addressed to negroes, of a most inflammatory and wicked nature. It is hardly to be wondered at, that when cases of tampering with slaves become frequent, society rises superior to its laws, and frees itself of those pests which it would be unable to cast off, did it wait for or depend entirely on the law's delay.

Tompkins beught a fine horse—paid $300 for him.
The horse, after a few months, proved to be lame in the right shoulder—Tompkins was distressed about it. Tried all sorts of remedies—embrocations, liniments, Mustang included, under the advice of the very best veterinaries, still the lameness was obsti-nate and grew rather worse. He became desperate, and hit upon this device to sell the horse. He drove and hit upon this device to sell the horse. He drove an ugly teapenny nail plump into the right forefoot, and left it there for ten days; when he led the tortured animal limping to a neighboring blacksmith to be shod. The blacksmith was a dealer in horses and quite a jockey in his way. After a while Tompkins called at the shop for his horse. "That's a splendid gelding of yours, Mr. Tompkins—pity he's so lame," says the blacksmith. "He is, indeed," replied Tompkins—"But he is very lame, and I am afraid he can't be cured." "Perhaps not and may be he can," says Vulcan. "How much would you be willing to take for him, just as he stands, Mr. afraid he can't be cured."

be he can," says Vulcan. "How much would you be willing to take for him, just as he stands, Mr. Tompkins, money down?" "Ah, well, I don't know what to say to that. If he is curred, he is worth all I paid for him, and even much more, as horses go now; but if his lameness should continue, you see he is worth notbing—not a dollar."

The blacksmith began to chaffer. First he offered $50; then $100; and at last $200 for the animal. Tompkins was persuaded, and accepted the last offer. The money was paid and the horse delivered on the spot. "Now," says the blacksmith, "as the bargain is finished, I will be frank with you, Mr. Tompkins. I suppose I can tell you just exactly

Tompkins. I suppose I can tell you just exactly what ailed the horse." "Can you?" says Tompkins, "well I shall be glad to hear it. I thought you must know all about it, or you would not have paid me so much money for him." The blacksmith produced much money for him." The blacksmith produced the nail and assured Tompkins, with great apparen the nail and assured Tompkins, with great apparent satisfaction, that, while paring down the horse's hoofs, he had found that infernal long piece of iron, and drawn it out of the frog of the near fore foot. "Is that all you know about it?" Tompkins asked very quietly. "All! isn't that enough, for conscience' sake?" "Well," replied Tompkins, "I don't know as it is. I will be equally frank with you, since the bargain is finished. I drove that nail into the foot, but the lameness is in the shoulder, I think you will find."

think you will find."

As soon as any one of the ethical professors at Cambridge can find a moment's relief from the spiritual-rapping discussion, Mr. Tompkins and his friend would be delighted to receive a learned opinion from old Harvard upon the question of comparative reguery between the parties to this horse trade.

FEMALE OFFICE-BEGGARS .- Washington, June 7. There are some strange scenes, which may amuse an out-sider here, in the operations of the office-beg gars. There is no rest for their importunities. They keep a close watch on all the dispensers of Governkeep a close watch on all the dispensers of Government bounty. They waylay them in private places, and they even besiege them in their homes. Their arts are pretty well known abroad; but there is one feature in their operations that I, a stranger to political manners in Washington, must coafess I was not prepared for. This is the large number of females employed in the character of office-beggars. It is quite a little stroke of policy on the part of the masculine beggars to avail themselves of the tender pleadings and eloquent arts of the softer sex. tender pleadings and eloquent arts of the softer sex. The fair petitioners show the bachelor President no mercy; and in the ante-rooms of some of the Departments, too, you may see any number of inter-esting females, from the ages of sixteen to sixty, demurely waiting to prefer their suits.

At almost every daily reception of the office-beggars by Mr. Buchanan, there may be observed one or two old ladies in black, wearing the most mournful countenances and keeping modestly in the corners of the room, who, you may be sure, are primed for an affecting appeal to Mr. Buchanan about the overruling necessities of their family matters, which require him to provide for some dear husband or hopeful son. But the ante-room of the Department f the Interior, somehow or other, is es ecially besat ged by the female office-beggars; and the accom-plia hed and amiable manners which peculiarly disting, tish Mr. Thompson in his official station, as well as in the private circle, seem to have drawn upon him as tentions which must be embarrassing enough even to a gentleman of his gallantry and frank cour-tesy. 'The ladies first," is his standing order for all visito. 's, and there is no exception, even for the big politic ians.

Happening in the other day to see the Secretary, and while waiting in the ante-room, I was amused at a rather e iderly lady, who was evidently on an office-beggar's errand, and who was constantly occupied with wetting her fingers and smoothing her eapied with western her integers and smoothing her hair down in a cont, preparatory, I suppose, to ap-pearing in the august presence. On a sudden, a blooming girl of no more than seventeen summers, rushed into the room, all a-glow with excitement, and waving, with an air of triumph, a folded slip of foolscap, which she designated to the elderly lady, who it appears was here appearance in the summanion as there death. who, it appears, was her companion, as "her death-warrant." After spelling and tittering over the aforesaid document, which looked suspiciously like a clerical appointment, the old lady mustered up courage and advanced with quite an air of expectation into the Secretary's room on her own errand. In the space of a very few minutes, she returned in a very collapsed state—"Well, what did he say?" whispered the young lady. "He was mighty polite," replied the old ene; "but, Lord, that ain't nothing."

A very good story is told of one of the Cabinet officers. He had just got out of bed at an early hour in the morning, and before commencing his toilette, stepped into his parlor, which adjoined, when he was suddenly brought up by finding him-self face to face with an interesting female, who had been patiently awaiting him, and who had deter-mined to be ahead of all the office-beggars. There is said to have been a sudden vanishing of the figure in the ghostly night-shirt, while the lady screamed "murder," of course, at the apparition.

LARGE LAND SPECULATION IN SOUTHEAST MISSOU--We find the following extraordinary case of land speculation given by the New Madrid (Mo.) Southeast Missouri is waking up under the manipulation of St. Louis enterprise:

The price of land in Mississippi county, Mo., is getting high—instance, a large land holder sold to a dashing and gorgeous fellow (from St. Louis we believe) the other day, one thousand acres for $100 an acre. The pompous St. Louisan purchaser, not satisfied with a small purchase, borrowed a mule from the very fortunate land-seller, and $100 in cash, as his money was on denosit, to ride to see another his money was on deposit, to ride to see another farmer a few miles off. And this is the last that has farmer a few miles off. And this is the last that has been seen of the land-buyer. Land is, indeed, very high in Mississippi county! But, in the language of an auctioneer, mules and money go off better.

ATROCITIES IN ENGLISH HIGH LIFE-CASE OF LORD WESTMEATH.—The Tribune has a notice of an extraordinary scandal lately created in the high circles of English fashionable life. It is the case of a peer of the realm, Lord Westmeath, one of those hereditary legislators who, by the glorious Constitution of England, was permitted during the perpetration of the atroctites we are about to relate to frame and administer laws, and still contributes his wisdom to the National Councils. Within the last wisdom to the National Councils. Within the last fortnight a pamphlet has appeared in London from Lady Westmeath, the wife of this nobleman, containing a story of atrocities and persecutions so extraordinary and incredible that it would be impossible to accord it a shadow of credence were it not sustained in every line by indisputable circumstances and documentary evidence, chiefly taken from judicial records.

The lady is a daughter of the Marquis of Salisbu ry, one of the noblest houses of England, and has always borne a most pure and irreproachable char-acter, having filled the position of Lady-in-Waiting down to the hour of her death to the late Queen Adelaide, who was, like the present so eraign, scru-pulously fastidious about the reputation of the ladies who surrounded her. Many of the documents, too, on which the case rests were found among the papers of the late Duke of Wellington, who stands out as rather a prominent figure in this filthy picture, having been contributed by the present Duke, who aids largely in the bringing to light of many dark and hidden things.

By these documents and records it is shown that his hereditary law-maker kicked his noble wife, and beat her in all manner of forms and places-before child-bed, in child-bed, and out of it; blackened her eyes and bruised her breasts; kept her without half eyes and ordised her breasts; kept her without hair of the necessary food and fire, and wholly without money, and outraged every obligation most prized by wife, mother, and woman in the most atrocious way. In one instance, Lord Westmeath attempted, like another Othello, but without his suspicion, to smother her with pillows. Again, when on a visit to Carton, the residence of the Duke of Leinster, and with the residence of the Duke of Leinster, and within two months after marriage, when the first warm bloom of love should have scarcely passed, the following panorama of patrician life was exhibited, as pictured on oath by one of the Duke's domestics, a woman named Mackenzie:

"In the course of the night, deponent was awoke by Lady Westmeath running into her room, followed by Lord Westmeath; she was flying from him, and told deponent he had been heating her; he constitution." and told deponent he had been beating her; he con tinued first ordering and then begging her to return and that he would not touch her again; Lady West meath at length went back very much frightened deponent with them; the water-jug had plainly been emptied in the fire, which had been so put out, the bed was in con usion, the clothes pulled off, and lying on the floor."

The epithets which ornamented this endearing cene were quite in keeping, but cannot be printe in our columns. Anxious to cultivate her mind, too, in a manner becoming the wite of a British peer, it appears that he took out of the library at Carton and pressed upon her for perusal a number of works, which she names, of the most filthy and immoral character, for possessing which any bookseller in our city would be indicted, and which, we trust, are not a specimen of the class of literature with which the libraries of British peers are adornated. But this Loyal and his lady are not the only ed. But this Lord and his lady are not the only characters in this drama. It appears that the Dowager Lady Westmeath, his Lordship's mother (a little circumstance which may account for the character of the hero and the whole of this foul affair) endeavored to induce her daughter to repeat upon no less a personage than the Duke of Wellington the part of Mrs. Potiphar with Joseph, for the purpose of advancing the political interests of her son; and when the wife expostulated, her Lord's answer was, "Oh, my poor, dear mother, she didn't know what a square-toe she was talking too when she said that to you." Lady Westmeath, adds. "Lord Westto you." Lady Westmeath adds: "Lord West-meath is still alive and will deny this, but I solemnly declare it to be truth, and that I write this as if I thought myself on my death-bed, and looking forward to every syllable having to be tested in the world to come." And when this outraged woman threatened to return to her mother, the Marchioness of Salisbury, and claim the protection of her mother's home the answer was, with his fist clenched and shaking it in her face: "She give you a house and home? She dare not! She knows she under my thumb, and that, if she did, the whole of her life for the last forty years would come beleclare it to be truth, and that I write of her life for the last forty years would come be-fore the public." Next follow a number of details too horrible for publication, revealing, on the part of this British peer, a scientific exquisiteness of de-bauchery which surpasses anything ever witten in the pages of Den or born in the prurient imagination of Eugene Sue.

What a picture does all this present of moral Eng-What a picture does all this present of moral England, that home of all domestic decorums and becomingness! Nor, it is said, is this a solitary instance. Already in the clubs and saloons of London, scandal whispers a hundred similar scenes in high life which this exposure may hurry into light; and public opinion seems unanimously to ratify that portion of the judgment of Sir J. Nichol, who tried this cause, in which he says: "It is much to be feared that husband and wife, particularly among the higher ranks, who, from education or habit, have more command over their external behavior, often appear command over their external behavior, often appear to the world to be mutually civil and kind, when at home, as in this case, they are mutually ill at ease; and many a wife in England is obliged to wear a countenance cheerful and clad in smiles who carries under it an aching heart."

countenance cheerful and clad in smiles who carries under it an aching heart."

Such pictures, however degrading to our common humanity and horrible to dwell on, may not be without a compensating result. Mrs. Norton and Lady Bulwer, seeing the tide of opinion up and angry, have again published the story of their wrongs and given impulse to its swell. From the publication of Lady Westmeath's pamphlet may be dated the enactment of a new law, which will give to women in England at least protection from wrong, and shield many an innocent heart from sorrow and from suffering.

THE CELEBRATED HOLLAND REMEDY FOR DYSPEPSIA.

DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS. LIVER COMPLAINT,

WEAKNESS OF ANY KIND

FEVER AND AGUE,

STOMACH OR LIVER.

STOMACH OR LIVER,
Such as Indigestion, Acidity of the Stomach, Colicky Pains, Heartburn, Loss of Appetite, Despondency, Costiveness Blind and Bleeding Piles. In all Nervous, Rheumatic, and Neuralgic Affections, it has in numerous instances, proved highly beneficial, and in others effected a decided cure.

This is a purely vegetable compound, prepared on strictly scientific principles, after the manner of the celebrated Holland Professor, Boerhave. Because of its great success in most of the European States, its introduction into the United States was intended more especially for those of our fatherland scattered here and there over the face of this mighty country. Meeting with great success among them. I now offer it to the American public, knowing that its truly wonderful medicinal virtues must be acknowledged.

its truly wonderful medicinal virtues must be acknownedged.

It is particularly recommended to those persons whose constitutions may have been impaired by the continuous use of acdent spirits, or other forms of dissipation. Generally it naneous in its effect, it finds its way directly to the seat of rice, thrilling and quickening every nerve, raising up the drooping spirit, and, in fact, infusing new health and vizor in the system.

NOTICE—Whoever expects to find this a beverage will be disappointed; but to the sick, weak, and low spirited it will prove a grateful aromatic cordial, possessed of singular remedial properties.

CAUTION.

The great popularity of this delightful Aroma has induced many imitations, which the public should guard against purchasing. Be not persuaded to buy anything cise until you have given Boerhave's Holland Bitters a fair trial. One bottle will convince you how infinitely superior it is to all these imitations.

IMPORTANT DECISION-WATCHES ARE NOT MAIL-ABLE MATTER. - An important decision was rendered in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, in relation to the liability of Postmasters and other employees of the Postoffice Department, under the United States laws, and determining to some extent what may be properly transmitted by mail:

In the case of the United States vs. Burton, the In the case of the United States vs. Burton, the defendant, who was a Postmaster at Ewington, Illinois, had been indicted for stealing two watches that came to his office, that had been mailed at Freeport. According to the evidence at the prisoner's first examination, the watches had been put into a paper box about four inches square, containing no other letter or writing, and when they arrived at Ewington, Burton took them out of the box and appropriated them to his own use.

ton, Burton took them out of the box and appropri-ted them to his own use.

Burton was indicted under the 21st section of the act of Congress of March 3d, 1825. His counsel moved to exclude the testimony of the witness who mailed the watches, on the ground that the watches were not "mailable" matter under the following provision of the act of Congress of March 3d, 1845: provision of the act of Congress of March 3d, 1845:
Section 15. And be it further enacted. That "mailable matter" and "matter properly transmissable by mail" shall be deemed and taken to mean all letters and newspapers, and all magazines and pamphlets periodically published, or which may be published in-regular series, or in successive numbers, under the same title, though at irregular intervals, and all other written or printed matter, whereof each copy or number shall not exceed eight ounces in weight, except bank notes sent in packages or bundles, without written letters accompanying them; but bound books of any size shall not be held to be included within the meaning of these terms. And any packet or packets, of whatever size or weight, being made up of any such mailable matter, shall subject all persons concerned in transporting the same to all the penalties of this law, equally as if it or they were not so made up into packet or packages.

Ludeo Treat decided that under this act in con-

Judge Treat decided that under this act, in connection with that of 1825, the watches, having been put up in a separate package, were not "mailable matter" within the meaning of the law; and that the defendant was not liable to a prosecution under the United States laws for abstracting them from the United States' mails—being only amenable to the laws of the State for the larceny. The prosecuting attorney having stated that this was the only point at issue, the court instructed the jury to find a verdict of not guilty. The prisoner was ordered to be kept in custody.

GEN HENNINGSEN'S DEFENSE OF GEN. WALKER.

New York, June 13, 1857. A story about a man whom Gen. Walker is alleged to have shot, after his capitulation with Capt. Davis, for bringing in a bottle of brandy, has been so pertinaciously repeated that I feel called upon, as cognizant of the facts, to lay them, with your permission, before your readers.

On the morning of the 30th of April, a soldier deserted from the Rangers. In the afternoon he was caught in his own quarters, inducing the men to desert, and rather in liquor. In consequence, he was remanded till quite sober. At 9 o'clock P. M. I repaired to the enemy's camp to see Capt. Davis, to hear what he had to say, but without powers to make any capitulation, and without any idea that a capitulation would result from this interview. At 2 o'clock in the morning I returned to Gen. Walker's head-quarters, and found the deserter then and there brought up for examination. He fully admitted his guilt, was condemned and ordered to be executed according to the laws of war. As to the circumstances of that execution, as he was not tied he very naturally made an attempt to escape, when one of the soldiers fired at him and brought him down, and the others rushed up and despatched him. It may be worth while to state here that three days before Gen. Walker had published a general order offering a free pass to any officer or soldier who chose to quit his camp.

After communicating to Gen. Walker the particulars of my conference with Carp. Davis he weight his camp.

After communicating to Gen. Walker the particulars of my conference with Capt. Davis, he took the morning to reflect over the matter, and it was nine o'clock on the 1st of May before he agreed to capitulate, and several hours after that before the capitulation was sagned.

It is hardly worth while to notice here and cap.

ate, and several hours after that before the capitulate, and several hours after that before the capitulation was ssgned.

It is hardly worth while to notice here and contradict such absurd stories as those which charge me with killing and eating a woman at Granada, but I avail myself of the opportunity to remark that such correspondence as that of the Times from Panama, published June 13 and signed F. W. R., is one tissue of misrepresentation. For instance, the Miss Eva he mentions never was in the guard-house of Rivas; and with regard to her treatment, I can only say that she not only refused to leave Rivas but sent her refusal in writing to the allied generals, saying that she preferred to remain with the Americans. In future I shall leave to others as well acquainted with facts as myself the refutation of the calumnies by which the popular sympathies are attempted to be enlisted against Walker and the cause in which he fought. Of five individuals active in the interests of Costa Rica and of those who have been supporting that interest in this city, one can be shown to be a murderer, one to have been two years imprisoned for a forgery, another to have been prosecuted for forgery, and the fifth to have served out his time in a State prison. Three of these individuals, it can be further shown, are men whose services Gen. Walker had respectfully declined, but whose efforts, through various disguises, to enlighten the public through the pub ic press, have been remarked, and may not, if continued, remain unacknowledged by Walker's friends.

I am, sir, yours respectfully.

C. F. HENNINGSEN.

C. F. HENNINGSEN.

Our enterprising friend, Mr. Samuel Clay, jr, reached home, a few days ago, from Mexico, where he has been purchasing mules and horses. He left home last winter, and entered Mexico in company with two or three companions at Matamoras. He penetrated the country to the distance of about one hundred and fifty miles, remaining among the Greasers only so long as was absolutely necessary to accomplish the objects of his journey. He succeeded in purchasing about three hundred mules and forty horses, which he drove to Illinois through Texas, the Indian Territory, and Missouri, a distance of two thousand miles. The stock is now upon the prairies in Illinois recruiting. Wien they are fat enough they will be driven to New Haven, Conn., and then shipped to the West Indies. This seems a long way round to reach the market, but it is no doubt the cheapest and most profitable. Cattle, we believe, are very often driven from Texas to Illinois and thence to the Eastern cities, but this is the first instance, within our knowledge, of mules brought from Mexico north. Mr. Wm. S. Rogers is the partner of Mr. Clay in this venture, and we hope to see them reap a rich reward for their enterprise.

Mr. Clay, as he came out of Mexico, met Mr.

Mr. Clav, as he came out of Mexico, met Mr. John Westbrook, one of our countymen, going into the country on the same errand.—Paras Chizen.

A letter from Hodgenville says:

The court of inquiry closed their proceedings in the Simpson murder case on last Thursday—the result of which was to commit Hunter, Despain, and Thompson to jail to await a final trial for the murder of Henry Simpson. There seems but little doubt on the minds of those who witnessed the trial as to their guilt, though the proof seems to be of a circumstantial character. cumstantial character.

Movements of Gen. Wm. Walker.— General William Walker reached here, as we yesterday announced he would, in the 12 o'clock train last evening, from Washington. He is stopping at the Girard House, where he was visited this morning by a number of his personal friends. He says that he has written a letter to President Buchanan, which will be published in a day or two, explaining to the people of the United States his past cureer in Nice. will be published in a day or two, explaining to the people of the United States his past career in Nicaragua, and defining his position in reference to that country and this, and his plans and purposes for the future. He declares that his only object is to regenerate and reclaim to civilization a territory occupied by a depraved population and torn by civil dissension, and avows a decided intention to return to Central America, with a view to reconscipability. tral America, with a view to reconquer his supremacy there, and place himself at the head of a liberal and progressive government, in sympathy with the Democratic institutions of the United States. He denies most positively that he ever uttered a sentidenies most positively that he ever uttered a sentiment expressing any difference of feeling on his part as between the Northern and Southern sections of this confederacy. In reference to the allegation which has been circulated by the press, that he, on one occasion, had exclaimed: "Cuba for the South, but not for the Yankees," he says that he never wrote or spoke such a phrase. In accounting, however, for the origin of the report, he state: that the words were written in Spanish, by a young Spanish girl, across one of his own letters, and that the letter so marked, being among papers of his which were lost in a hasty retreat, was afterwards published, and the offensive expression which was interpolated by another, had thus reached the public without explanation, and prejudiced him in the estimation of the people of the Noath.

Gen. Walker will depart to-day at 2 o'clock for New York, where he expects an enthusiastic reception.

New York, where he expects an enthusiastic reception, and will, in a public speech, explain his course and attempt its vindication.—Phil. Journal, 16th.

VENUS BY DAYLIGHT .- Quite an excitement was Venus by Daylight.—Quite an excitement was produced on our streets yesterday morning, by the somewhat unexpected appearance of the planet Venus, by daylight. She was easily seen with the naked eye as late as ten o'clock, presenting the appearance of a clear white spot in the heavens.

The variations in the distance of Venus from the earth are very great, but at her least distance the illuminated portion of her surface visible to us is very small. On the 10th of May she was in what is called her inferior conjunction, and was then only some 26,000,000 of miles distant. Her greatest brilliancy is when her position is intermediate between her inferior conjunction and her farthest elongation, and occurs about five or six weeks before and after the date of the former. The present year she will be most brilliant on Monday next, the 15th inst.

It is somewhat unusual to see any of the planets by daylight, with the unassisted vision. Hence the sight of Venus at 9 o'clock in the morning, with the sun shining brilliantly, was a novel and interesting one. To the mind of many an observer, who had paid but little attention to the astronomical phenomena of the year, the idea of the comet whose coming has been predicted, was instantly presented. These has been predicted, was instantly presented. Those who wish to observe a most beautiful sight, should rise in the morning, and look to the East. They will find Jupiter and Venus both heralding the coming of the sun..—Natchez Courier, June 15.

TOBACCO RAISING IN VIRGINIA .- The Fredericksburg (Va.) Herald states that more tobacco will be planted in that vicinity this season than has been for the last fifty years. Half a century ago tobacco was exported from Fredericksburg by the thousand hogsheads, and from present indications we have the promise of a return to those prosperous times. The Herald thinks that indicious cropping will not impromise of a return to those prosperous times. The Herald thinks that judicious cropping will not impoverish the land to the extent that it did in former times, restoratives being found in guano and other fertilizers.

The Charlottesville (Va.) Advertiser says that the tobacco plant beds in that vicinity are in good order, and will furnish more plants than can be used. The planters were quite generally engaged last week in setting out plants. The season has been, so far, quite propitious for securing good "stands." If no accidents happen, the crop of tobacco in Albermarle for this year will be the largest ever raised.

HEREBY CERTIFY THAT I HAVE THIS DAY made a careful examination and adjustment of the Transit Instrument in possession of Messrs. Fletcher & Bennett, of this city, and that the same may be relied upon to obtain accurate time.

Assistant Cincinnati Observatory.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 30, 1856. This being the ONLY Observatory in the West, except that at Cincinnati, using a Transit for taking daily observations of the heavenly bodies to obtain accurate time, and, being carefully adjusted to the meridian of Louisville, and ENTIBELY and EXCLUSIVELY under our own control, the public may rely upon the accuracy of our time to the TENTH part of a SECOND. All Watches entrusted to our care will be adjusted and regulated with the greatest nicety.
